Notes

I am creating an example of how I feel we should tidy up the UI for Admin, some screens will have a large amount of content for the user to absorb. It would make sense to break this content into the relavant areas making it easier for the user to digest. I have used the basis of Form R-b from previous designs, reversing the negative space, so that the UI is not compramised when tables are displayed. The style will only apply to Form areas of admin but not the Form R-b content. This is standalone to the system UI pattern, and has a different UI style, an example of this at the end of this document.

Admin UI: People - Personal Details example

This is an example of how the page should be broekn into content areas. I have also highlighted the Mandatory and Optional fields (Refer to relevant the document for the rules for this).

Field rules

In regards to the order of the fileds, Madatory fields should ideally be listed first, flowing down and then right into the nextr column. The optional fileds are positioned at the end of the content box. This rule can be broken if both Mandatory and Optional fields must remain together for the content to make sense.
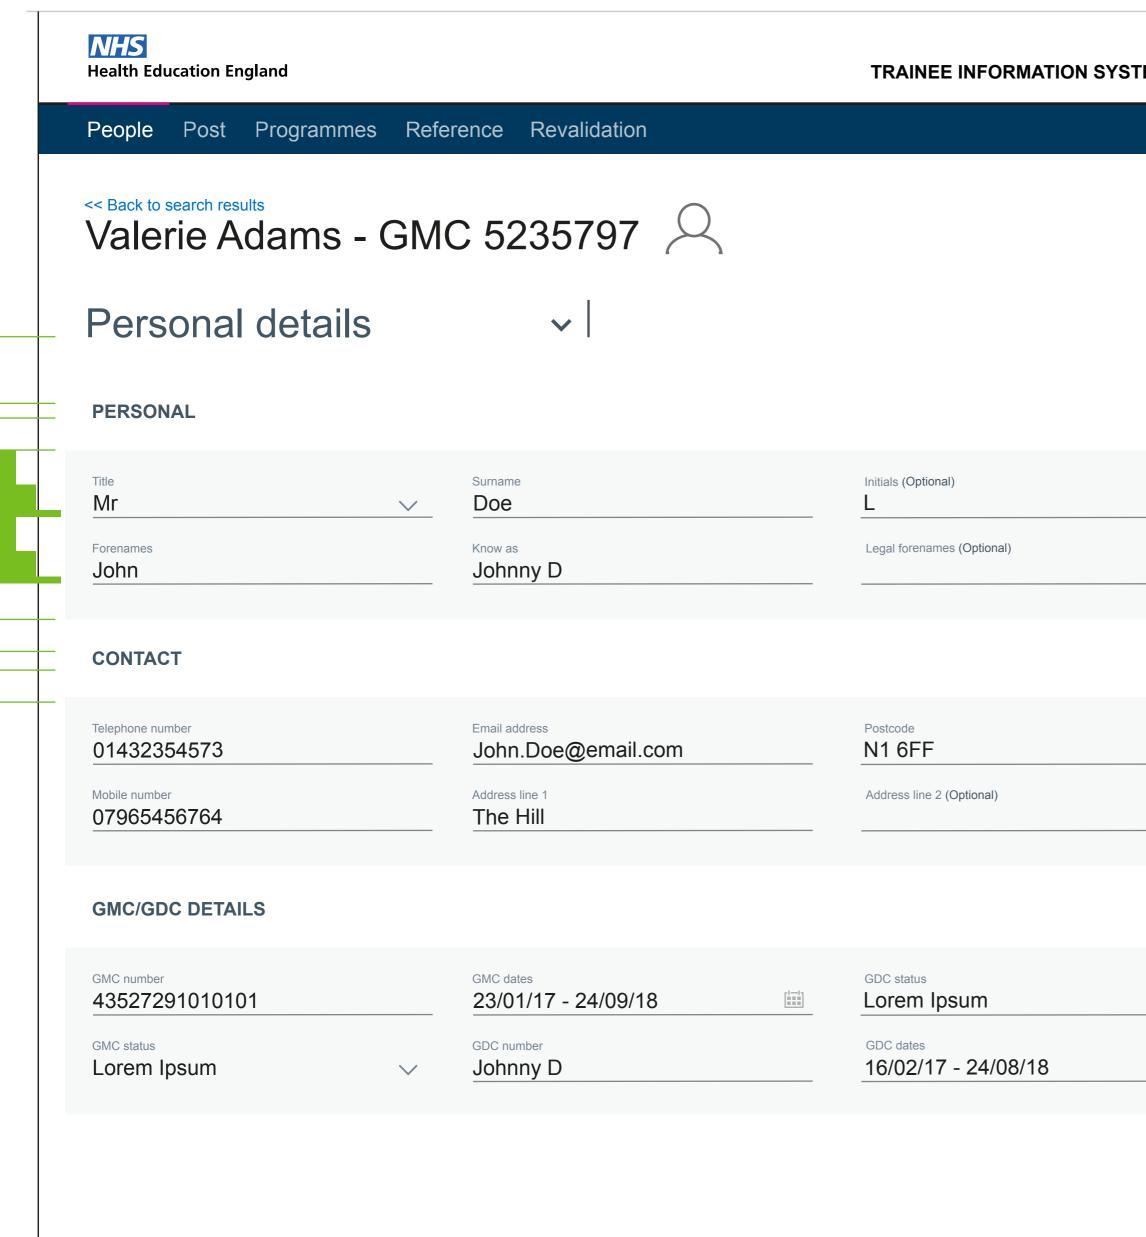

The following is an example of how the UI should break data areas and help the user to digest information regarding a Person Record and all Form/content screens. This example is a record that has been populated and ready to save.

This is an example of an error and error message in the Admin UI forms. The rules are based on the Long Form rules set by Steve and the Form R-b document.
